PREFACE A Uniform Notary Law

Because the United States is today a highly integrated and interdependent society, commercial and cultural distinctions which once existed between the states have, to a large extent, disappeared. Thus, there is a great need to modernize and make uniform the various state notary public statutes because:

1. Acts of notaries public are likely to have interstate implications, and,

2. Original justifications for diverse notary public laws have become anachronisms in today's society.

A Uniform Notary Law, drafted to meet the commercial and societal needs of the Twentieth Century, would bring all state notary public statutes into conformity.

All fifty States and the District of Columbia have enacted statutes concerning notaries public. Many of these laws were passed during the late Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries and, to a large extent (despite subsequent modifications), still reflect the commercial and cultural needs of that era. Additionally, many notary statutes also reflect distinctions among the states. For example, Louisiana, with its predominantly French origins, accords much greater status and powers to notaries public than those states such as Connecticut which followed the English common law. Various state notary statutes differ widely in scope; some states have comprehensive legislation regulating notaries public, others have laws which establish only minimal guidelines concerning notaries public. The latter, for example, often omit significant provisions with respect to procedural duties of notaries public in performing their official acts, as well as rules governing the liabilities of notaries public and their removal from office.

This proposed Uniform Notary Act is designed to meet the commercial and societal needs of the Twentieth Century by bringing all state notary public statutes into conformity, and, through its detailed provisions, to clarify and define the role of the notary public in modern society.

The Uniform Notary Act has been drafted as a comprehensive piece of legislation designed to encompass all facets of the law concerning notaries public. The Act is divided into eight Articles dealing with (I) General Provisions, (II) Appointment Provisions, (III) Powers, (IV) Duties, (V) Forms and Procedures, (VI) Liability, Fines and Imprisonment, (VII) Revocation of Commission, Action for Injunction, Unauthorized Practice of Law, and (VIII) Certificate of Authority. These Articles are further subdivided into parts and sections for quick reference.

The language of the statute is uncomplicated and easily comprehended by laymen who, to a great extent, constitute the ranks of notaries public in this country.

The words "appointing state official" appear throughout the Act. This official is a state officer because the notary is commissioned to act anywhere in the state. The appointing official is commonly the Secretary of State.

7 The appointing official has no discretion to grant or deny an 8 application for appointment-the applicant is automatically com-9 missioned, provided only that the application (including payment 10 of fees, submission of bond, taking of affirmation, etc.) is 11 complete and true. The appointing official may not, under 12 $\S2-101(b)$, commission an applicant who has not, by omission or 13 false representation, complied with all the requirements stated in 14 Part II of this Article. Further, a notary who is commissioned 15 despite his failure to comply with the requirements in Part II risks 16 having his commission revoked under §7-101(1), which in turn 17 disqualifies him from making application for appointment until 10 18 years have lapsed from the date of the revocation, according to 19 §2-201(6). The 10 year rule in the last mentioned provision 20 applies, of course, to a revocation for any reason listed in \S 7-101.

The powers and duties of a notary public as later enumerated are basic and elementary. However, a notary public must employ good judgment in the performance of all his notarial acts. Because judgment and competence are qualities that are difficult if not impossible to determine through general tests, this Act, through deliberate omission, advocates the elimination of notary public examinations.

28 Section 2-103 states that the appointing state official can 29 designate other offices in the state that he might need for 30 appointment of notaries public, record keeping purposes or to 31 issue Certificates of Authority.

32 Section 2-201 states that the applicant need only be registered 33 to vote in a state election in any of the United States, making it

1 possible for a person who is a registered voter in New York to 2 become a notary public in California, providing that he obtains the 3 signatures of three endorsers who are actually registered to vote in 4 California and provided that the applicant maintains a business or 5 residence office in California.

6 The applicant takes an affirmation that he has read and 7 understood the notary law. This affirmation is taken, and an 8 executed bond is submitted, in advance of the applicant's 9 appointment and commission by the appointing official. The 10 intention is to avoid unnecessary red tape for the notary applicant and the appointing official, by having the applicant fulfill all 11 12 requirements at one time—the time of application—and before the appointing official acts. As noted above, in most instances 13 14 commission will be issued as a matter of course, so that seldom will the bond be submitted or the affirmation taken needlessly. 15

16 The Applicant's Affirmation Section 2-204 was changed by 17 amendment of January, 1976 to insure that the applicant cannot 18 easily obtain an additional notarial commission under an assumed 19 name.

20 Section 2-301 provides that the appointing state official may 21 waive the fee for appointment if the notary is to perform acts for 22 and in behalf of a government office only. However, a notary 23 commissioned under this section is subject to the remaining 24 provisions of the Act, e.g., he must file an application and keep a 25 journal, and he may incur liability under Article VI.

1 Commentary – Article III 2 3 By completing a notary's certificate, the notary public makes 4 it possible for the public-at-large to rely upon the authenticity of 5 the person's signature (not the notary's signature) on the 6 document, and be informed that the contents of the notarized 7 document are intended to have force and effect. When considering the effect of Section 3-102, it is necessary to 8 keep in mind that the primary functions of the notary public are 9 to identify the signer and witness his signature on the document. 10 If there is a question of a disqualifying interest, it would be 11 advisable to obtain the services of a disinterested notary public. 12 Evaluate the following situations: 13 1. The attorney-client relationship where the attorney, a 14 15 notary public, is receiving a fee or retainer for drafting the document in addition to his fee, if any, as a notary public. 16 2. The officer of a corporation, stockholder of a corporation 17 18 or bank officer who is a notary public, acting on behalf of 19 his employer (the corporation or bank) who may be a 20 party to the transaction directly or indirectly. 21 3. The real estate salesman-notary public who notarizes a 22 deed in connection with the consummation of a sale of 23 property where he will receive a commission in addition to 24 his notarial fee. 25 4. The spouse-notary public who notarizes a document for

4. The spouse-notary public who notarizes a document for his or her mate when the spouse-notary public could benefit directly, indirectly or not at all.

After having considered carefully the responsibilities of a notary public and the possible disqualifying interest that arises in an attorney-notary public and client relationship, it would seem that the average attorney will turn to his secretary (rather than himself) to be appointed as a notary public.

This article contains a list of duties that the notary public is obliged to perform for the protection of the party who signed and for the public-at-large.

6 By keeping a journal of his notarial acts, the notary public 7 makes it possible for anyone who questions the authenticity of 8 the signature on the document at a later date to obtain evidence 9 of such authenticity from the notary's journal that could be used 10 in a legal action. The journal serves (1) to discourage forgers and 11 impostors by requiring a signature in the journal that can be 12 compared with the signatures on the document and on any 13 identification cards presented; (2) to provide the notary with 14 evidence (the person's signature in the journal) if it is later 15 necessary for the notary to prove in court that the person actually 16 appeared before him; and (3) to ensure that the person was 17 properly identified by requiring the notary to enter evidence of 18 identification in the journal. The pages of the journal must be 19 numbered and irremovable so that entries cannot be made or pages 20 inserted after the person whose signature has been notarized has 21 left the notary's office.

22 Evidence of identity required in Section 4-102(5) is necessary 23 to avoid forgery and impersonation. Sufficient evidence of 24 identification should be requested and the information recorded in 25 the notary's journal. Nothing has been included in this Act 26 defining exactly what constitutes positive identification of an 27 individual; this must ultimately be decided by a court of law. The 28 notary public is obliged to perform his duties in such a way that 29 this question will rarely need to be settled in a court of law. A 30 person could present to the notary public, as evidence of his 31 identity, one or more kinds of identification such as cards or 32 passports. The notary is obligated to exercise the judgment of a 33 prudent person of average intelligence to decide whether he should

1 accept this evidence as satisfactory and sufficient. If the person is 2 personally known to the notary public as a friend, relative or 3 associate, no identification cards would be necessary. The friend's 4 appearance, voice, mannerisms and other physical characteristics 5 could provide the notary public with sufficient and satisfactory 6 evidence of identity.

7 The person's signature in the notary's journal is, of course, 8 always mandatory regardless of what methods or means are 9 accepted as satisfactory and sufficient for identification purposes. By requiring in Section 4-103 that the person whose signature is 10 11 being notarized sign in the notary's journal, the forger and/or 12 impostor must duplicate his forgery at the time of the notarial act 13 on the document to be notarized and in the notary's journal. At 14 the time of the performance of the notarial act, the notary public 15 must carefully compare the person's signature on the identifica-16 tion card or cards with those subscribed in the notary's presence 17 on the document and in the notary's journal.

18 The person whose signature is being notarized must appear 19 before the notary at the time of the notarization to subscribe his 20 name in the notary's journal to avoid the notary's fraudulent 21 certificate occasioned when a party presenting a document for 22 notarization attempts to circumvent the executing witness provi-23 sions (§ 5-103), e.g., by assuring the notary: "My spouse signed 24 this deed at home, you can take my word for it."

Good business practice dictates that the notary public and the persons whose signatures were notarized initial all corrections and each page of the agreement in a corner as well as affix their signatures in the proper place on the document and notary's certificate.

Section 4-104 requires that a notary furnish facsimiles of his journal or other records upon receipt of a written court order, and only upon such order.

Section 4-202 introduces one of the most important innovations in notary law offered in this Act: it provides for the mandatory use of a rubber stamp seal capable of photographic reproduction. This change both updates notary law to take account of modern copying technology, and mandates uniform nationwide use of a manifestation of notarization (rubber stamp seal) that all persons may henceforth recognize.

7 The introduction of the rubber stamp seal overrules the 8 long-standing use of the seal embosser, which §4-203 now makes 9 optional. In earlier times, a "seal" was used in lieu of the personal 10 signature, for many people did not know how to write their 11 names. Today the seal embosser has an entirely different purpose 12 and should be used in addition to the rubber stamp seal. The seal 13 embosser makes indentations into paper that cannot be photo-14 araphically reproduced, thus helping to positively identify the 15 document that was intended to be notarized from an altered 16 machine copy that does not have the indentations made by the 17 notary's seal embosser. If a document contains more than one 18 page, the seal embosser should be used in a corner of each page. If 19 there is not enough space on the document for the notary's 20 certificate, the notary's loose certificate should be stapled to the 21 document and the seal embosser should be used to squeeze the 22 document and the notary's certificate together.

It should also be noted that reproduction of the Great Seal of the State is not prescribed on the rubber stamp seal or seal embosser.

Although illegibility of required information will not in itself invalidate a notarization (§4-204), an omission could affect its validity.

3 The forms prescribed must be substantially followed for the 4 notarization to be recognized and effective in the adopting state. 5 The form in $\S5-101(6)$ is not exclusive when executed by a notary not commissioned by this Act, but is exemplary, showing a form 6 7 that, when used by a person outside of the adopting state, is 8 assured to be understood as a notarization. The adopting state cannot, of course, prescribe notarization procedures to be fol-9 lowed by a notarial officer acting in his official capacity and 10 pursuant to an Act of Congress, nor can it deny effect to such a 11 notarization. A U.S. Consul, U.S. military officer, or foreign 12 13 notary using the form prescribed in §5-101(6) should include both his title and the authority or law under which he is acting as 14 15 a notar v.

The form of the acknowledgment is prescribed in this Act to 16 emphasize the importance of the statement that is signed by the 17 18 notary public. If the document is important enough to be 19 notarized, the notary public should be obliged to sign a proper 20 certificate of acknowledament that includes the words 'known to 21 me to be the person." This clause states that the notary public had 22 sufficient evidence that the person described in and who executed the document was the person who appeared before him. Further, 23 24 each §5-101 form states that the document being notarized has 25 been signed for "purposes therein stated," implying competency 26 of the person signing the document and helping to clarify the 27 meaning of the word "acknowledgment." If a person appears to be incompetent, the notary public must use good judgment in 28 29 determining whether he should perform his notarial act.

30 The Executing Witness Form in §5-103 provides for an 31 acknowledgment by a person who is unable to appear before a 32 notary. This form prevents undue hardship caused by illness or 33 inability to obtain a notary.

| 1 | Section 5-104 prescribes a particular form and procedure for |

| 2 | certified copies that is required today because of the invention of |
| 3 | machine copiers and also because recorders of public documents |
| 4 | now perform such duties. The form for the certification of a |

3 The revocation provisions are not mandatory. The state 4 appointing official is vested with discretion, within the bounds of 5 reason and fairness, to uphold the integrity of the Act and of the 6 office of notary public by invoking the revocation sanction in 7 appropriate circumstances. Repeated disregard of the Act's pro-8 cedural requirements, or conviction of criminal acts calling 9 personal integrity into question, would be serious enough to 10 warrant revocation of a commission. Minor variances with requirements or the belated submission of matter relevant to an 11 12 application for appointment may not necessitate removal.

13 The notary must retain his qualification to vote in a state 14 election and maintain a residence or business office within the 15 state, or his commission may be revoked. These requirements are 16 intended to avoid the possibility that a notary, in jail or convicted 17 of a crime that involves loss of voting privilege, could not be 18 removed from office.

19 Revocation of Commission, Section 7-101 was changed by 20 amendment of January, 1976. Paragraph 5 was added to further 21 clarify the notary's responsibility to be impartial and unbiased. A 22 notary should not use his title of notary public when signing his 23 name to an endorsement of a product, service or person. The title 24 of notary public should not be used to imply that a product is of 25 good quality because the person who signed the endorsement was 26 a notary public. Paragraph 6 was added because some notaries 27 public advertise themselves as notaries public in a language other 28 than English. In some foreign countries the title of notary public 29 can be used only by those who have had many years of education 30 and training. An entirely different problem arises when the no-31 tary's employer advertises "Free notary service to customers 32 only." This practice is discriminatory. The notary's employer has 33 also been known to use a valid notarization in advertising intended to make the buyer believe the offer is more valuable by virtue of the display of the notarization or a notary's seal.

Part II of this Article provides a means of enforcing the ban on 3 the unauthorized practice of law. Some notaries public who are 4 not attorneys believe that, by virtue of their notarial appoint-5 ments, they are allowed to give legal advice or practice law. The 6 practice of law and the practice of a notary public, heretofore, 7 have been so entwined and confused that it seems appropriate to 8 make this procedure available when the appointing state official 9 does not act under the revocation provisions in Part I. 10

DRAFT LEGISLATION FOR A

Uniform Notary Act

THE POSITION OF THE NATIONAL NOTARY ASSOCIATION

The National Notary Association first published the Draft Legislation For A Uniform Notary Act in September, 1973. In less than five years, Missouri and California adopted this model law virtually in toto. Other states have since introduced revisionary legislation based, in large part, on the Uniform Notary Act.

As one of the authors of the Act, the NNA has been asked to actively promote its passage. Consequently, this position paper has been prepared to explain both the NNA's long-standing role as a non-advocate and its purpose in donating the Draft Legislation For A Uniform Notary Act to the public domain.

PURPOSE OF THE NATIONAL NOTARY ASSOCIATION

The National Notary Association was founded in 1957 to "impart knowledge, understanding, and unity among Notaries Public in their service to society." Education of the nation's more than 2.5 million Notaries on legal, technical, and ethical facets of their calling has remained the primary goal of the Association. As a teacher, the NNA has long noted that a lack of both definitiveness and uniformity among state notarial codes has been a major obstacle in the education of Notaries.

Society, though, is the real victim of the nation's diverse, often conflicting, and usually less than comprehensive Notary statutes, many enacted over 200 years ago. These laws, reflecting the isolationist, rural culture of a bygone era, are conspicuously out of tune with the realities of modern commerce.

The NNA became convinced it is in the best interests of society that a comprehensive and modern code be uniformly adopted by all states.

GENESIS OF THE UNIFORM NOTARY ACT

While the NNA possessed the expertise in notarial customs and practices to lay the foundation for a model law, it required the expertise of attorneys, lawmakers, and governing officials to ensure that this law was workable and legally sound.

Thus, the NNA contacted Yale Legislative Services of Yale Law School to assist in preparing a draft. An organization providing drafting services for public interest legislation, Yale Legislative Services accepted this challenge.

The NNA also formed an Advisory Committee of concerned legislators, secretaries of state, recorders, attorneys, judges, and Notaries from around the nation to evaluate the drafts. Committee members worked without compensation for what one member termed "this critical public-interest legislation."

The Draft Legislation For A Uniform Notary Act, then, was created through the combined efforts of Yale Legislative Services, a distinguished 12-person Advisory Committee, and the National Notary Association. Drafted in everyday language, the Act embodies significant departures from present Notary laws, including: stringent notarial recordkeeping requirements; mandatory bonding of all Notaries; specification of wording for a wide variety of notarial certificates. For the first time, modern Notaries are given clear and comprehensive guidelines for performing their duties.

THE NNA'S EDUCATIONAL ROLE

The NNA believes that its adherence to a non-advocative, strictly educational role best serves both Association members and society at large. The NNA's commitment to education is total: it will not divert energies or financial resources to lobbying efforts for the Uniform Notary Act or any other legislation.

The Uniform Notary Act must stand on its own merits and recommend itself to legislators concerned with the public interest. The Association is prepared to provide these legislators with a wealth of background information and technical assistance on the Uniform Notary Act in particular and on the Notary office in general. Further, legislators can expect "grass roots" support from the tens of thousands of NNA members and other Notaries whom the Association has impressed with the importance of statutory reform.

The NNA has donated the Draft Legislation For A Uniform Notary Act to the public domain and will not withhold rights to publication or use by any responsible group. Not only legislators, but publicspirited attorneys, bar associations, consumer-protection groups, and all persons concerned with effective Notary laws should have a strong interest in the Uniform Notary Act.

ENACTING THE UNIFORM NOTARY ACT

The Draft Legislation For A Uniform Notary Act is a model, to be adopted as a whole or in part. It was authored by the nation's leading authorities on the office of Notary Public to provide legislators with a workable alternative to the United States' largely outmoded notarial statutes. A growing volume of interstate and international transactions lends increasing urgency to the need for uniform Notary laws reflecting the realities of 20th century society. Lawmakers can look to the Draft Legislation For A Uniform Notary Act as the most authoritative and definitive guide to Notary law reform available.
